He referred to the fact that the occasion was a notable one because for the first time in the history of organized labor in the District Labor day was guests had been invited to be present and with a great deal of pleasure he introduced

REPRESENTATIVE WADE OF MISSOURI. the chairman of the House labor committee whom he spoke of as one of the best friends that organized labor has in the west. These few words of hearty commendation were indorsed by the crowd with enthusiastic cheers, and Mr. Wade was obliged to wait until the demonstration had ceased before he could court of Louisiana, is visiting relatives in this make himself heard. He then said that he had been sick and was still weak. He wanted. however, to meet with the bricklayers of the District in their first celebration of Labor day, and had come out in spite of his weakened condition. He was not able to speak, but would yield to his distinguished associates in the House who were on the platform.

REPRESENTATIVE QUINN'S SPEECH. Representative John Quinn, the next speaker, was introduced as one of the pioneers in the agitation for the adoption of eight-hour legislation. The reception of Mr. Quinn by the crowd showed that he was a favorite with the crowd showed that he was a favorite with the workingmen. He has a magnetic manner, and his eloquent periods aroused the greatest enthusiasm. He spoke of his early life, when he followed the trade of stone cutter, and said that there was no fact in his career of which he was prouder than he was of that. Twenty years ago, he said, as a member of the stone street northwest have returned to the city cutters organization in New York city he had taken an active part in the great eight-hour strike. He suffered for his prominence in this agitation, as he found that he was unable to obtain employment. This circumstance he mentioned to show that laboring men must Col. R. G. Rutherford and family have returned to the city from Doubling Gap White Sulphur Springs, Pa., where they have been sacrifices would be commensurate with the loss, even though that reward might not come Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Marsh of New York at once. He was still identified with the cause of his trade. He paid a high tribute to Repre-sentative Wade and his services in the House. His championship of the cause of labor on Saturday was specially notable and bills were passed such as had never before been enacted by Congress.

THE PENDING BILLS IN CONGRESS. He predicted that these measures when they became laws would be of much advantage to the toiling masses. He had been especially in- in Louisiana and Arkansas and had practically terested in the eight-hour law and rejoiced that this bill had finally passed the House. The alien contract bill was another important measure, as it was intended to prevent capitalists from bringing over the paupers of Europe to oppress American labor. If the Senate did not pass this law, the speaker said that it would fail in its duty to humanity. He speake of the great railroad strike in New York. Senate did not pass this law, the speaker said that it would fail in its duty to humanity. He spoke of the great railroad strike in New York and said that apparently the men had come out without knowing exactly what they were striking for. Still, in his opinion, the employment of Pinkerton men by the railroad corporation was a gross outrage and he had introduced to the last man, and they were striking for still, in his opinion, the employment of Pinkerton men by the railroad corporation was a gross outrage and he had introduced to the last man. If it failed now it the employment of this class of men illegal.
The committee would consider the resolution today and he hoped that the Bricklayers'
Union would send a delegation to appear before the committee and urge the enactment of such legislation as would prevent a repetition of these outrages.

ADVOCATING THE RIGHT OF SUFFRAGE IN THE DIS-In conclusion he referred to the fact that the citizens of the District were deprived of the right of a voice in the management of their sturing speech from Paul T. Bowen of Asown affairs. He advised that they agitate sembly 66, K. of L. until the powers that be give them the status of citizens of the United States and not that of foreigners. He advised the girls not to marry a man unless he was a citizen with all the rights and privileges of a citizen. He spoke eloquently of Labor day, which, he said, was not intended so much to be a day of picnics as a time when the laboring men should gather together and discuss their future and declare to the world that they are in the fight to stay there would be in the fight to stay there. are in the fight to stay there until their triumph is won. The celebration of this day, the speaker said, shows that laboring men believe in free speech, in arbitration and in gaining their rights by legitimate means. This day was not for communists nor anarchists, but for American citizens. He spoke of what had already been accomplished in labor legislation by the passage by the House last week of the

the services of Representativo Wade. THE LAST SPEAKER OF THE EVENING was H. J. Schulties of the legislative committee of the Federation of Labor. He said that the record of legislation during the past week in the House was notable in the history of the labor movement. Five bills have been passed, should he cat." namely the eight-hour bill, the eight-hour back-pay bill, the alien contract labor bill and two bills for preventing the competition of prison contract labor with honest American labor. He predicted that next year a bill would pass Congress making Labor day a holiday in the District. After the speechmaking the orators were entertained at a banquet in the hall and the Knights of Labor at River View. Labor day was celebrated at several of the river resorts yesterday with a rush. Gay parties of picnickers started down on the river boats from an early hour in the morning and many waited until the very last boat up in order to make just as long a holiday as possible. The number of women and children taking advantage of the day to get a breath of river air was a very noticeable feature of the day.

River View was one of the points of interest.

In fact this popular resort was an especially big point of interest, as about 2,000 people dis-ported themselves there all day, which number was largely augmented by the incoming

The excursion to River View was under the auspices of Mount Vernon Assembly, No. 1798, K. L., painters and decorators. It has never en supposed before that painters and decorabeen supposed before that painters and decora-tors have a special faculty for managing ex-cursions, but from yesterday's experience it would seem that they did. The Samuel J. Pentz made three trips yesterday to River View and each time carried a big crowd of men by themselves, men with their families, women with babies, women without babies, women with whole rafts of babies of all sizes and ages and a host of pretty girls whose feet could hardly be kept from dancing until the pavilion was reached. The excursion was under the general charge of a committee from Assambly 1798, aided by delegates from many of the other organizations.

The day at River View was spent in all sorts time and three rooms were needed to hold all the writers. The grand jury, one court and the regular examination rooms were all called into service. One hundred and fifty persons male and female, took an examination for copyists, one males for transfer in the copyists' list, and thirty-one males for the position of records and editing in the Agricultural Department.

of mild enjoyments. There was a remarkable absence of the disturbances which follow a too serious attention to the beer when it foams. Dancing seemed the favorite amusement and was indulged in with a vim and energy that brought a becoming finsh to many an already pretty face. If you did not know how to dance or could not find a girl to dance with you there was plenty else to do. The roller coaster was in full swing and the heavily loaded cars were sailing down the incline amid the clatter of the machines and the shrill screams of the feminine machines and the shrill screams of the feminine and quiet little picnic parties in the woods. ELO QUENCE IN THE PAVILION-AUGUST DONATH'S

ADDRESS. One of the events consisted of the addresses delivered in the pavilion by well-known local orators. August Donath of Typographical Union, No. 101, was the first speaker. Mr. Donath thought that Labor day should be a number the crowd recognized the faces of statesmen who had stood up on the floor of the House as the advocates of the cause of labor. When the band ceased playing the president of the union, Mr. Thos. W. Levi, stepped to the front and with a few terse retime when organized labor should come out the trades with that of a few years ago. Organization of labor, he said, was not only a benefit to the laboring man, but a bulwark which will protect republican institutions. The menace to the republic was organized capital, not or-

THE NEW YORK CENTRAL STRIKE. Mr. Donath referred to the New York Central strike and said that in that case the mercy was shown by the organized laborers who forbore to kill hired assassins. Labor organizations should be continued for the laborer and the country's protection. The pauper labor of Europe grew directly out of the lack of labor organizations.

Continuing, Mr. Donath said that labor was in an excellent condition in Washington. The men were protected and supported during times of sickness. He called upon the organizations to depend upon themselves and not rely on outside help, and cited as an example of what happens by going outside of their own bodies—the library which his union had tried to establish. Eight hundred dollars had been obtained by contributions when the comthing the collector ever collected was the $800 in the treasury at the rate of $100 per month and the library was still in the dim distance.

THE WORKING MEN OF WASHINGTON. Mr. Donath then urged his hearers to keep on in their present line, to urge all apprentices to become union men, and above all to keep strictly within the law. No body of men stood higher in any community than the laboring men of Washington. They had gained many battles, but all had been gained lawfully. If wages had been raised by their efforts the entire community had been benefited, with the exception of the man who does nothing but cut his coupons. Mr. Donath was often interrupted by cheers. Mr. N. A. Dunning of the editorial staff of the National Economist followed in a short

BEAUTIES OF THE PARMERS' ALLIANCE. Mr. Dunning said the Farmers' Alliance stood as an earnest protest against the present condition of labor. He then gave a sketch of the use of the party, starting in Texas in 1882 for the purpose of fighting cattle thieves. It had been engaged in fighting thieves of some sort ever since. In 1887 it had been consolidated with farmers' organizations

PAUL BOWEN'S SPEECH. Mr. Bowen thought that this was a much more pleasant way of spending the day than the District would enjoy the right of local suffrage.

When the applause had ceased which marked the close of Mr. Quinn's eloquence Representative John Henry McCarthy of New York was introduced as a property of the close of Mr. Quinn's eloquence Representative John Henry McCarthy of New York was no reason why the laboring man should not go to Europe it he market that every man should have at least a little cottage of his own, with flowers and a garden, and birds and creeping vines, and mosquitoes and barbed-wire fences, and church an should not go to Europe if he wanted to and to the seashore for the summer. There was land enough and money enough for all if it was anyways equally divided. The average have got to go.

MORE HOLIDAYS. Mr. Bowen then argued that there should be more holidays. In Europe he had found no end of holidays. In France every saints day was a holiday and they have enough saints to go round during the entire 365 days of the year. "In this country," said Mr. Bowen,
"there were not half enough holidays. Only one man's birthday was celebrated. The country ought to celebrate Yorktown.
Appomattox, the birth of Lincoln and also one or two death days. The working people could well take a holiday when God in his good grace chose to remove Third Vice several labor bills, and paid a high tribute to his good grace chose to remove Third Vice President Webb of the New York Central road. Labor should also take a day of rest when the scab disappears. The working people," thought Mr. Bowen, "have got to save themselves without the help of any outsiders. The platform

At Marshall Hall. Labor day was a day of pleasure at Marshall Hall. Plasterers' Assembly, K. of L., with the necessary wives and children and sweethearts, to say nothing of the sisters, cousins and aunts, crowded on to the steamer Macalester and had entertained at a banquet in the hall and the a first-class holiday. When the 6 o'clock trip amusements in the park were resumed and con- had ended at Marshall Hall there were fully 2,000 people on the grounds. Dancing in the pavilion was almost continuous and Floor Managor William Rabbitt put in what was beyond question a labor day.

The director of athletic sports was John Fitzgerald and the crowd enjoyed shell races, tub races and a base ball game-the latter between teams from the Y.M.C.A. and the Emmet Guards, resulting in a victory for the militiamen of 4 to 0. There would have been ample opportunities
